

Political Science 221: Advanced International Relations Theory

Global Governance

Professor Arthur Stein
Spring 1999

This course is a tour d'horizon of recent work in international relations dealing with global governance. Each week we will discuss, in depth, one book. We will talk about where the book fits in the field, where it attempts to take the field, we will assess the logic of the argument, the nature of the empirical work, its implications, etc. The books evince a variety of methods and orientations.
